CORK, Oct. 17 .- The first death among the eleven hunger strikers in Cork jail occurred to-night. Fitzgerald died at 9:45 o'clock, having fasted sixty-eight days, two days more than has Lord Mayor MacSwiney.

Fitzgerald was placed under arrest for shooting a private soldier named Jones outside Fermoy Church on September 17, 1919.

The condition of Fitzgerald and Murphy had become so grave to-day that, with the consent of the other hunger strikers, the prison doctors were permitted to give Fitzgerald medical treatment. A Cork specialist also was called in.

At that time the physicians said that except for the devotion and care of the nuns in attendance upon the prisoners it was certain that several of them would long since have been dead. Their faithful nurses saw to it that not a wrinkle was in the sheets to cause bed sores, that the temperature of the cells was not allowed to vary, and that daily mansages were given the prisoners, using the greatest care.

All the hunger strikers were declared Fitzgerald at the time was declared to be most pronounced. A recent report said the eleven men, as they lay stretched in their beds, were to all purposes dead, only their eyes revealing that life still lingered in their bodies.
